Course Mask

What is a course mask and why is it so important?
The course mask is the template of format for each course entered. It is made up of the department abbreviation and the course number. The course mask consists of a total of 15 characters, digits, and spaces. In degree audit, the formatting for any courses entered in an exception must be precise, or the exception won’t work properly.

Format for the OSU Course Mask
1st-7th positions: The first seven positions are OSU’s official seven-character Department Abbreviation. For example, the department abbreviation for courses offered by the Department of Political Science is “POLITSC.” If there are fewer than seven characters in a department abbreviation, then there must be enough spaces entered to total seven positions.

8th position: The eighth position is a space.

9th-15th positions: The last seven positions are the course number. The ninth position is where the 4 digit number begins for OSU courses or OSU equivalent transfer courses. For transfer courses that came in with an S (special credit) or T (technical credit) character, that character will appear in the 9th space.

<tr>

<td>SPACE S 0 0 0 . 0 2</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

Courses with 3 digit course numbers

Please Note: Due to the quarter-to-semester conversion that took place at the end of Spring 2012, there may be a few remaining courses with 3 digit numbers on transition student audits. These will require an extra space in the 9th position, instead of beginning the course number. The course number will then begin in the 10th position.

</tbody>

Exception Note for 3 digit course numbers: Course substitution, Use Course, and Modify Codes type exceptions all utilize the original value of the course. This means that if a student took it as a quarter course, regardless of whether it has a “processed as” 4 digit value, the 3 digit course number will need to be used to make any of these three types of exceptions. All other exceptions will utilize the 4 digit value, whenever there is one. Please speak with your degree audit coordinator for additional information, if needed.
Pseudo Names

What is a Pseudo?
The pseudo name is the way the audit differentiates between different areas of the audit. Each requirement and sub-requirement has its own pseudo, which needs to be used when working with certain exceptions, such as the Insert Course or the Delete Course.

How to Find a Pseudo
To find the pseudo name, special versions of the audit can be run. The option to do so appears on the Request an Audit page, toward the bottom, under “Options.” There is a dropdown menu for “List All,” which provides options L-Full Listing and M-Include Pseudo. After selecting this, the audit can be run as usual. The resulting audit will provide you with the pseudo names.

Examples of Pseudos
Screenshot of an audit run using M-Include Pseudo. Requirement and sub-requirement level pseudos are indicated in red.

Set an Alternate Catalog Year for Minor (A2)

Definition
This exception is used to change a student’s catalog year for the minor (where applicable – varies by college of the primary major). Catalog Year is the term/year in which the student began following the curriculum under which they will be certified to graduate. The default minor will automatically follow the catalog year of the primary major.

Please note that this exception will change the catalog year for all minors on a student’s record.

Example
The student’s catalog year is Autumn 2017. The student added a Statistics minor in Autumn 2019, so the academic advisor for Statistics wishes to place the student on the newer version of the curriculum.

Set an Alternate Catalog Year for the 2\textsuperscript{nd} Major (A3)

Definition
This exception is used to change a student’s catalog year for the second major. Catalog Year is the term/year in which the student began following the curriculum under which they will be certified to graduate. The default second major will automatically follow the catalog year of the primary major.

Please note that this exception will change the catalog year for all 2\textsuperscript{nd} majors on a student’s record.

Example
The student’s current catalog year is Autumn 2017. The student added an Entomology second major in Autumn 2018, so the academic advisor for Entomology wishes to place the student on the Autumn 2018 version of the second major curriculum, which is different than what is automatically brought in under the Autumn 2017 catalog year.

Course Substitution (CS)

Definition
A student’s course can be substituted for a specific course in a list of acceptable courses. With this exception, the student’s course assumes the identity of the course being substituted.

It is advisable to try an “Insert Course” exception before attempting a “Course Substitution” exception.

Example
A student receives general credit for a transfer course, PSYCH S000.02. This course was approved to meet the GE Social Science: Individuals and Groups sub-requirement and was substituted for PSYCH 1100.

Definition
This exception will delete a course (typically one the student has taken) from the list of acceptable courses for a specific sub-requirement. It is typically used to affect the flow of courses in a degree audit.

A New Media and Communication Technology major also has a minor in Professional Writing. He would like to use COMM 2511 for the minor and take a different course to fulfill the Visual Communication Design section of his major. However, COMM 2511 is matching into the major, so it will need to be removed from the section to allow it to match into the minor.

Modify Codes (MC)

Definition
This exception allows you to append condition codes associated with a course. A condition code is a one-character code that identifies certain attributes of a course. For example, a condition code of “D” is assigned to duplicate courses that are not repeatable. Please contact your degree audit coordinator if you feel you need to modify a code to discuss the best way to handle it.

Example
A student is taking PLNTPTH 5150 for a second time. The student has been approved to use both instances of the course to count toward the major.

Waive Pseudo (PW)

Definition
This exception is typically used when a student has achieved some level of competency that is not course-specific (e.g., through life experience, proficiency testing, etc.), or when completing an advisor sign-off sub-requirement.

This exception is similar to “Waeve Course,” “Waive Requirement,” and “Requirement Complete” exceptions.

Example
The Mathematics major in the College of Arts and Sciences requires students to see an advisor to obtain final approval of the major. In order for the major to go complete on the audit, the advisor must complete a waive pseudo exception on the final sub-requirement in the major.

Before the Exception:

Entering the Exception:

Step 1. Select “Exceptions” from the menu bar, then select the “Add Exception” button.

Step 2. Select “Waive Pseudo” from list of Exception Types.
Step 3. Enter the pseudo course for the sub-requirement being waived:

Requirement Complete (RC)

Definition
This exception is used when an entire sub-requirement or requirement is to be fulfilled.

The “Requirement Complete” exception is virtually the same as “Waive Requirement.”

Example
A student is majoring in Special Education, which has a pre-requisite of ENGLISH 1110.0X. The student has transfer credit for ENGLISH 2367.01. The advisor has determined that the student does not need to take ENGLISH 1110 because a higher level course was already completed.

Requirement Modification (RM)

Definition
This exception can modify many values at the requirement and sub-requirement levels. It is particularly useful if course count or hours for a requirement or sub-requirement needs to be adjusted.

Example
A student has transfer credit that came in from a quarter school as 2.67 hours. The course content meets the elective requirement for the City and Regional Planning major, but because it only transferred in as 2.67 credit hours, the student is going to be short of meeting the minimum. Consequently, the electives sub-requirement still needs 3.33 hours to go complete. The advisor feels that the spirit of the requirement will be met after the student completes one more 3 credit hour course, so the extra .33 hours can be removed.

Foreign Language Requirement Exceptions

Requirement Structure
The Foreign Language requirement is designed to pick up all applicable foreign language courses until it hits the top language course (1103 or equivalent), which will then complete the requirement. If the only applicable foreign language course is the top course, then this requirement will be considered complete.

Making exceptions to the requirement
To make an exception to this requirement, please refer to the following:
- The pseudo is LANGPROFICIENCY
- The sub-requirement that will be adjusted is encoded to look for 1 course and 3 hours

Complete with ONE course:
1. Use an Insert Course exception with pseudo LANGPROFICIENCY. (See p. 16 for step-by-step instructions for an Insert Course exception).
2. If the course being entered is less than 3 hours, you will need to modify your hours in the Required hours field.

</tr>
<tr>

</tbody>
</table>
Complete with more than one course:
1. Use an Insert Course exception with pseudo LANGPROFICIENCY (see p. 16 for step-by-step instructions for an Insert Course exception).
2. Increase course count from 1.

Example of completing the requirement with more than one course: This sub-requirement is now looking for a total of 4 courses – the one that it was already looking for, plus three additional courses added by this exception.

Complete with NO courses:
1. Use a Requirement Complete exception with pseudo LANGPROFICIENCY (see p. 23 for step-by-step instructions for a Requirement Complete exception).
2. Text should be entered in the “Displayed As” field that will appear as text on the audit; e.g., “Native speaker of Chinese.”

Example of completing the requirement with no courses: Text entered in the “Displayed As” field will appear on the audit.
